Population size and main characteristics in Italy

The decrease in the number of births that started in 2008 is still going on.

In 2016 children born were less than half a million, just over 69,000 of which were foreign (14.7% of the total).

Compared to 2015, there was an overall reduction of 12,000 units (2,700 for the foreigners).

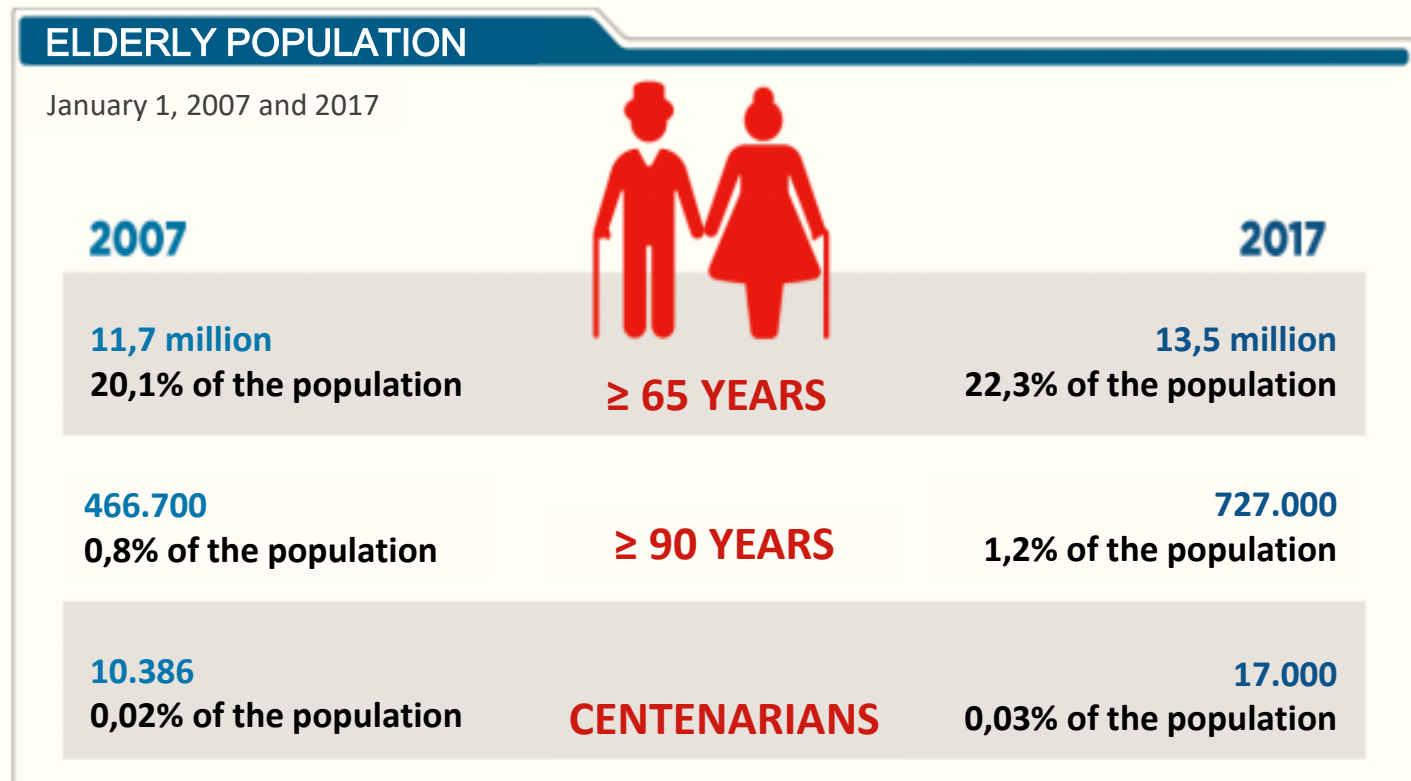

Population size and main characteristics in Italy

Italy has one of the highest rates of population ageing in Europe and at global level.

21.4 % of the population is 65 years and older.

In this age group, 3 % are older elderly people, i.e. aged 85 years or more, and of these 16,390 are over hundred-year-old.

Population size and main characteristics in Italy

Numbers, practice types, organization, training

About 47,000 general practitioners (GPs)

and 13,000 non-stop assistance physicians

GPs are freelancers under contract with the NHS and therefore are self-employed and not in the employ of the NHS.

GPs in Italy:

Numbers, practice types, organization, training

Every citizen has the right to freely choose his own GP and can change his choice at any time.

Each GP has a list of patients.

The maximum number of patients for each GP (the so-called ceiling) is 1,500 people.

In Italy every GP has on average 1100 adult patients (aged over 14 years).

GPs in Italy:

To access General Medicine, a specific training certificate in general medicine is required.

Specific Training:

- ✓ a three-year practical and theoretical course carried out at regional level.
- ✓ a general-practice certificate is issued for the exercise of general medicine under the NHS.

GP's practice

GP's Surgeries

GP's surgeries are open at least 5 days a week (but in many cases even on Saturday morning for at least 2 hours), and ensure availability throughout the day from 8am to 8pm.

Non-Stop Assistance

From 8pm to 8am, non-stop assistance physicians operate, guaranteeing home and outpatient care in assisted structures during night times, pre-holidays and public holidays.

A non-stop assistance physician is foreseen every 5,000 inhabitants.

GP's practice

In recent decades, GP's activity has been evolving from “solo” work to teamwork, through participation in associative forms of general medicine and the use of surgery's staff.

A reorganization of the primary care system has been introduced.

The Regions should define the organization of local services through the establishment of single-specialization teams, consisting of just GPs, and multi-specialization teams, which shall provide medical care through the coordination and integration of GPs, other professionals in the area (paediatricians), nurses, midwifery, medical technical staff, rehabilitation staff, prevention and social staff.

Teamwork and professional integration should provide a more complete and qualified response to the needs of the population, operating on a 24 h/7d basis.
